THE CLIENT

Katana Labs is a corporate spinout of ING Bank which helps asset managers make data-led decisions. It does this through its proprietary AI software which scans trading platforms for potential investment opportunities. Users can also filter through and search across the whole bond market in the Katana dashboard, to find opportunities that match their strategy and mandate.

PROJECT SCOPE

Our client a newly funded fintech company wanted our help to hire a UX designer to play an instrumental role in the development of their product. We were tasked to source skilful UX professionals to deliver the best user experience within the time and budget available.

THE CHALLENGE

The company required an end-to-end implementation professional to audit, plan and execute an improved user capability of their systems. The client needed a designer that served across all their functional areas, along with a purpose-built interface for seamless trade ideas and transactions.

THE SOLUTION

Providing the right support, rmg digital helped analyse requirements and found that in the client needed a short term solution to plug the gap right away. rmg digital were able to provide 2 contractors who were both identified in less than 24hours and onboarded in a few days to allow Katana time to set up the requirements.

Following this temporary placement it allowed us time to ensure we searched the market for the best available talent. We compiled a shortlist for them in under a week having had time to do a full market search. By getting it right first time round we were able to help Katana save not only significant time but money too by enabling them to replace the temporary resource quickly.

rmg makes time and effort not only to understand the role but also the company and the people behind it which gives a personalised aspect on the recruiting. They come and meet you in person, see the office and get a "feel" of the position and people. With this attention to detail, they calibrate the profile and find the right fit for the position.
